Breeder must have this information available upon request by law enforcement or animal control. It is the new owner's responsibility to obtain these documents from the Breeder during the sale or transfer of the animal.
- Medical: A veterinarian can exempt a non-breeding pet for medical / health reasons. This exemption must be documented on the pet's medical record and must include the pet's microchip number. The pet owner must have this information available upon request by law enforcement or animal control.
